Poetry: "The Builders" by H.W.Longfellow

LRC 103a

Duration:15:00

Walls of Time was commissioned by the LSU School of Music for the inauguration of the new music building in 1986. The piece opens in a highly chromatic manner and employs frequent changes of harmonies. This portion is followed by a section which is rhythmic, diatonic, and very jubilant in character. The latter portion was later used by the composer in the work Tale for trumpet, trombone, and piano.

In the 1994 he was honored with a Distinguished Teacher White House Commission on Presidential Scholars.

Poetry: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

THE BUILDERS

All are architects of Fate,
Working in these walls of Time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme.

Nothing useless is, or low;
Each thing in its place is best;
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.

For the structure that we raise,
Time is with materials filled;
Our to-days and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.

Truly shape and fashion these;
Leave no yawning gaps between;
Think not, because no man sees,
Such things will remain unseen.

In the elder days of Art,
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the Gods see everywhere.

Let us do our work as well,
Both the unseen and the seen;
Make the house, where Gods may dwell,
Beautiful, entire, and clean.

Else our lives are incomplete,
Standing in these walls of Time,
Broken stairways, where the feet
Stumble as they seek to climb.

Build to-day, then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base;
And ascending and secure
Shall to-morrow find its place.

Thus alone can we attain
To those turrets, where the eye
Sees the world as one vast plain,
And one boundless reach of sky.
